

11: What Happens Next?

Thank You

Thank you for attending this public exhibition. Community involvement is a key part of flood risk management and your views are appreciated.

Next Steps

Your views are important to us and will inform the final outline design of the flood scheme.

The Council will collect any questions and feedback provided by you, and will respond in the form of a community consultation report. This report will be published and demonstrate how your views have been taken into account in the final proposals.

We will issue a further newsletter once the community consultation report and final proposals are available. The Council will then seek to publish the final proposals under the Flood Risk Management (Scotland) Act 2009.

It is important to note that the implementation of a scheme is still likely to be some time away and is not yet certain, due to the need to secure statutory consents and other approvals.

Figure 18 shows the indicative timeline for the work that still needs to be done before construction of the flood scheme can commence.

For further information regarding the ongoing flood risk management activities being carried out in the area, please refer to the PowerPoint presentation being shown.
